

“...a chemical you can’t even pronounce, you don’t know what it is, you don’t know how it can affect you...should I be using this?”

Dr. Virginia Salares

According to CBC Marketplace, Canadians spent more than $275 million on household cleaning products last year. Companies are not required to tell us what is in these products. “...but you don’t have any information about... long term toxicity”

Kathy Cooper Sr Reseacher, Canadian Environmental Law Assoc.

“No toxic information is available for more than 80% of the chemicals in everyday-use products. Less than 20% have been tested for acute effects and less than 10% have been tested for chronic, reproductive or mutagenic effects.” National Research Council
